STILL CALLING.

A Party of Two Thousand Springfield People Call on General Harrison To-day.

A BIG BRIGADE WITH PLUG HATS.

Probably the Last of the Delegations To Be Entertained By the Republican Candidate.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 22.—It was thought that the Drummer's demonstration Saturday was the wind up of Gen. Harrison's reception of visiting delegations. About all the surrounding cities and counties had been represented by the numerous gatherings. But a telegram from Springfield states that the plug hat brigade of that city will arrive today and call on Gen. Harrison. It is promised that the visitors will number two thousand.

BRITISH AMERICANS.

They Hold Their First Annual Convention in Chicago today.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The first national convention of the British Americans assembled at the Grand Pacific today which is attended by delegates from all parts of the United States as well as a large number of friends in sympathy with the objects of the association from the Dominion. The purpose of the convention is the organization of a national association consisting of the state associations of the different states. The convention was called to order before 3 o'clock by Seymour Kies. Although it is but little more than a year since the British American association had its first meeting in the United States large delegations have arrived to take part in the proceedings from Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, Illinois and representative and influential men from many other states including those of the Pacific coast. It is beyond peradventure of doubt that the organization will be placed upon a national basis before the close of the first day's proceedings. It is recognized as destined to parties that the association is destined to exercise no inconsiderable influence in municipal state and national affairs in the future and moreover that it will count as an important factor in even the approaching presidential election in its newly organized form.

The Washington Home.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The investigation into the management of the Washington Home, an institution established here several years ago for the humane treatment of inebriates and endowed by the tax payers of the city to the extent of $20,000, revenue from city and private sources commenced today. It is charged that the institution has been managed in a most unbusinesslike manner, very much as the Cook county hospital was under the regime of the late Charles F. Johnson, who is now in the Joliet penitentiary, and those for whose temporary aid and maintenance was founded have been ill treated and neglected, whenever admitted there and that it has been run entirely for the benefit of the managerial staff.

Mine Workmen Crushed.

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 22.—While at work in the Browning coal mines here to-day Charles Freeman, the boss driver, and Dave Howell, the boss track man, were seriously and perhaps fatally injured by fall from a cage. Both of Freeman's thighs are broken, and he is seriously hurt internally. Howell's abdomen is horribly crushed and both legs paralyzed. He is the eldest son of Alderman Thomas H. Howell, of this city. The chances for recovery of either are very slight. They are well known and universally liked here.

Mud Run Disaster Claims.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 22.—William Connell, a prominent business man of Scranton, has been appointed by the Lehigh Valley Railroad company to make all arrangements toward an amicable settlement with persons representing relatives and friends of those killed and injured in the Mud Run disaster. Mr. Connell has the power to adjust all claims, and they will be settled separately and given a full opportunity to state grievances and present claims.

The Case Opened.

LONDON, October, 22.—The commission appointed to investigate the charges of the late Sir Charles Russell, former member of parliament, opened court at 11 o'clock this morning. Sir Charles Russell, leading counsel for Mr. Parnell, opened the proceedings by applying for a release from Westford prison of Mr. Wm. Belmond.

A Missouri Citizen Dies.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Oct. 22.—Gen. James Craig died suddenly last night, of cancer of the neck, aged 74. He was one of the most prominent men in Missouri. He sat in congress with Thos. A. Hendricks before the war and commanded the union forces at St. Joseph during the war.

A New "Sill."

MANUFACTURE FOR EXPORT STOPPED.

A Constitutional Question Long Fought At Last Decided Against the Distillers.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The supreme court today sustained the constitutionality of the prohibition law of Iowa, which forbids the manufacture of intoxicating liquors for exportation to other states. It was pleaded that the prohibitory feature is so far as the manufacture for exportation is concerned was in conflict with the constitutional provisions giving congress the sole right to regulate interstate commerce.

The court sustains the state law prohibiting both the manufacture and the sale of liquors for mechanical medicinal, pulmonary and sacramental purposes.

MISS PHEMPS MARRIED.

The Popular Writer Joined in Wedlock With a Preacher.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—The marriage of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of "Gates Ajar," "Jack," "Old Maid's Paradise," and other works, to Rev. Herbert D. Ward, of New York, a summer resident of Gloucester, was celebrated quietly on Saturday at Miss Phelps' residence at East Gloucester by Professor Phelps, of Andover, her brother. The knowledge that this event was to take place has been carefully withheld and will create surprise to the public generally.

THE TIMES LIBEL.

Great Excitement Attending the Opening Of the Parliamentary Investigation in the Parnell Case.

STILL PURSUING AN EVASIVE POLICY.

Representatives of Over 200 Newspapers From All Parts of the World Reporting the Trial.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—It is seldom that a more extraordinary scene has been witnessed within the precincts of and the inner approaches to the courts than that which prevailed in their vicinity this morning. The entire neighborhood was thronged with a vast and almost uncountable mob from immediately after sunrise and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the parties having business to transact could force their way through the thronging crowds. An unusually strong cordon of police was stationed along the immediate avenues leading to the trial room, where Judges Hannen, Day and Smith assembled to resume the parliamentary inquiry preferred by Charles Stewart Parnell against the London Times. Judge Hannen presided. The result of the first sitting of the parliamentary commission constituted of the three judges named which was held September 17, last was felt to be decidedly in favor of Mr. Parnell. During the recess since taken by the commission, the Times has published comments on the case to the prejudice of Parnell and his colleagues and as under the British laws such a course is punishable it is reported that before the day's proceedings close Sir Charles Russell, Parnell's leading counsel, will move that Mr. Walter of the Times be arrested for contempt of court in publishing remarks upon a case while sub-judice. At the former hearing the Times was granted the right to inspect all the bank accounts and books of the hand and national agents to which access was not denied them, but the Times solicitors in return and in accordance with Sir James Hannen's ruling was ordered to produce all the letters, papers and documents on which the series of articles it published on "Parliament and Crime" were founded. This the Times was expected to do this morning, but its counsel appeared still inclined to pursue a policy of evasion and suppression, and a decidedly dramatic situation was caused in court when Sir Charles Russell demanded the production of what have long been described and referred to in the proceedings as "the forged letters." The case from the aspect it wears at today's opening is undoubtedly destined to be one of the most famous judicial inquiries of modern times. Representatives of more than 200 of the leading newspapers of England, Ireland, the United States, France, Russia and Germany are present in the court reporting the proceedings. In the event of the production today of any letters purporting to be the letters on which the articles in the Times which led up to the inquiry were founded, Sir Charles Russell will ask the commission to grant an indemnity to Patrick Egan, of the United States to appear before the commission and testify. It is believed that if that concession is granted by the commission that Mr. Egan can give irrefragable evidence as to the authenticity and source of the "letters" used by the Times. The interest in this investigation becomes more intensified as it progresses, and a sensational denouement is expected at almost any moment.

FOR ARBITRATION.

The French Discussing the Possibility of Establishing an International Congress.

Paris, October 22.—A conference between many of the leading and prominent members of the Chamber of Deputies and representative members of the British parliament was commenced here today to discuss the project of establishing an International Arbitration congress. Mr. William Cromer representing the English parliamentary delegates at a recent interview with Mr. Goblet at the French Foreign office explained to Goblet the proceedings of the English Arbitration Deputation which went to America in the interests of this movement and represented that a strong feeling existed in the United States in favor of a Franco-American Arbitration treaty. Mr. Goblet heartily endorsed the project and said that it would afford the French government pleasure to enter into such a treaty. One hundred and twenty members of the chamber of deputies signed the memorial requesting that a meeting of French and English representatives identified with the movement be held of which to-day's meeting is the outcome. It is confidently anticipated that public sentiment will be very widely aroused in France, the United States and England favoring the proposed congress and it is considered more than probable that as a result of the present conference the project will be carried very shortly into practical effect.

THURMAN AT HOME.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 22.—Judge Thurman reached home yesterday none the worse for the severe experiences of his week's campaign tour in Indiana. As a matter of fact the old Roman appears to be in better health, and brighter and more brisk generally before he went away and the fact was an agreeable surprise to the members of his family that remained at home. He has three remaining dates, one at Cincinnati on the 25th, Wheeling, West Va. 30th, and Nelsonville, Ohio, November 3rd. He will then return home and deposit his ballot on November 6 in the box at his precinct polling place like any other citizen.

THE GAS & WATER COMPANY GIVES NOTICE OF ITS LATE EXTENSION AND IMPROVEMENT.
The Duluth Gas & Water company recently widened up and is endeavoring to do better by the people of Duluth, in the matter of water supply and purity at least, than ever before. The following report was made at the forenoon's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce by secretary Phelps and coming direct from the Gas & Water company may be regarded as official. I have received from Mr. R. B. C. Bement engineer and treasurer of the Duluth Gas and Water company, the following statement for the information of the chamber and the public.

Distance of old intake pipe from shore 182 ft.
Extension of pipe.....272 ft.
Total length of intake pipe.....454 ft.
Depth of old intake pipe.....21 ft.
Depth of present intake pipe.....45 ft.
The intake pipe at the end is connected with a "spider" with three branches, bending upward four feet below the surface of the lake. Mr. Bement states that soundings show that for 200 feet beyond the present end of intake pipe there is only an additional depth of one foot. On his invitation I have visited the pump works and find a new and powerful pump about ready for service, with a capacity of 3,000,000 gallons in 24 hours. This makes the total capacity of the works 5,000,000 gallons in 24 hours. Estimating 50 gallons of water supply per capita for each 24 hours, the present works will be equal to supplying a population of more than 100,000 people. Mr. Bement furnishes the further statement of the depth of intake pipe and depth at which water is taken in intake pipe of the following cities:

Racine, Wis., depth of intake pipe, 40 feet. Takes water at 30 feet.
Milwaukee, depth of intake pipe, 20 feet. Takes water at 8 feet.
Chicago, depth of intake pipe, 40 feet. Takes water at 25 feet.
Cleveland, depth of intake pipe, 39 feet 9 inches. Takes water at 27 feet.
Detroit, (St. Clair river) intake pipe takes water at 20 feet.

This statement shows that the depth of the intake pipe and the intake of the water at Duluth are much greater than at any of the places named.

THE CHAMBER MEETS.
ROUTINE BUSINESS TRANSACTED AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE THIS FORENOON.
A regular meeting of the citizens' association was held this forenoon, with good attendance. A number of communications were read, among them one from General Manager Winter of the Omaha, stating that the New York Central officials would not visit Duluth this fall, and another from the New York Board of Trade requesting the co-operation of the chamber in the efforts to secure the establishment and maintenance of the naval reserve as lately outlined by congressional bills. The committee appointed to confer with the council on electric light reported it had done nothing. A discussion followed in which it was the evident feeling that something must be had in the way of better light, and that the committee should act. G. G. Hartley was added and the committee given further time. Respecting the efforts to increase membership a number of sub-committees were reported as appointed and a list of new names was given.

The report of the Gas & Water company, found in another column, was read and discussed. It was requested that the secretary discover the best manner of obtaining right of way through the platted portions of Minnesota Point to a connection with the new line of the Terminal company. He was also directed to call the attention of the county commissioners to the depredations on Minnesota Point and request them to stop them, it being reported by Mr. Hartley that two other power had jurisdiction in the premises, especially as the title to so much of the property was in dispute both by tax titles and riparian right claims. The chamber then adjourned.

The Dickens entertainment at the Baptist church last night was a success in every particular. The music was excellent and every one thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Pete Tiner received a deserved thrashing last night in Cullen & Hathaway's saloon by Slim Sullivan. Tiner abused Sullivan until patience ceased to be a virtue and the whipping then occurred.

Even ball was the scene last evening of a Democratic crowd who listened to a harangue by Dr. Bert Robertson, an ex-

Republican, who attempted to tell the audience why he seceded from the Democratic camp. They were enthusiastic at times and especially so when the ex-Republican told an anecdote which was interspersed with words bearing a slight relation to profanity. His remarks on the tariff question indicated wholly free trade and the tariff he spread out to the laboring men had no effect, as the class of toilers in the West End are too covetous on this subject to be dazzled by such humbug.

A New Meat Market.

Will be opened by Cox Bros. October 24 at the corner of Tenth avenue east and Second street. As this firm handle nothing but the best grade of goods people living at the East End will find it very much to their advantage to go to this market and select their meats. All kinds of poultry and game will be kept on hand, also the finest bulk oysters in the city.

No Other Railway in the Northwest

has in so short a period gained the reputation and popularity enjoyed by the WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINE. From a comparatively unknown factor in the commercial world it has been transformed to an independent influential grand Through Route, with magnificent depots, superb equipment and unsurpassed terminal facilities. Through careful entering to details it has won for itself a reputation for solidity, safety, convenience and attention to its patrons second to no railway in the country. Pullman sleepers, models of painted comfort, dining cars in which the cuisine and general appointments are up to the highest standard, and coaches especially built for this route are among the chief elements which have contributed towards entering successfully to a discriminating public. Located directly on its line, between Minneapolis and St. Paul, and Milwaukee and Chicago, are the following thriving cities of Wisconsin and Michigan: New Richmond, Chippewa Falls, Eau Claire, Ashland, Hurley, Wis., Ironwood, Mich., Bessemer, Mich., Stevens Point, Menasha, Menasha, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Waukegan, and Burlington, Wis.

DESERVING ITS HOOM.

THE GREAT ACTIVITY IN PERMANENT IMPOVEMENTS AT WEST DULUTH—THE CAR AND STEEL COMPANIES' PLANTS.

Whatever may have been thought by croakers—and there are croakers and kickers against every good enterprise—in regard to the West End and West Duluth, now is no foolish enough to doubt the fact that a great manufacturing city is soon to spring up as part of Duluth itself. The foreground of the town who plan to build a second Pittsburgh of this great level tract of ground so suitable to its purpose cannot now be doubted and there is not only hope but certainty that a dense population will soon spring up about the base of Grassy Point. In fact there is "right smart of folks" there now and new houses are being begun about daily and pushed rapidly to a completion and occupation. The town is growing and in two years it will have a population of 10,000 people, more than twice as great as West Superior has today, and in five years time that the smoke from dozens of towering stacks will fill the skyward.

Work is being pushed there now, the Minnesota Car company have over a hundred men and teams at work and have progressed so far with their plant that they are putting in the stone foundations for their massive buildings. They have already received several car loads of material from the Duluth Iron & Steel company's quarries at Fond du Lac and are expecting more. They have to build a factory for the manufacture of iron and steel and will be delivering it next week. A very large force of carpenters will be put on and the work of construction will be put on at the Duluth Iron & Steel company's works in the west end, a great structure of steel and iron built of brick made at West Duluth (Indian) meeting completion and the great furnace which will begin early next season to turn out the 120 tons of iron daily is assuming shape. Other work is going on and the busy throng of men at the plant.

Myers Bros., agents of the Land company, state that they are selling very rapidly, one day lately they sold $30,000 worth and are disposing of over $100,000 worth of land. Large profits have already been made on these lots and larger will be made in the future. Many of the lots sold are for improvement in the spring and a very great increase in the number of dwellings will be made then.

AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

CERTAIN PROVISIONS IN THE GAME LAWS OF MINNESOTA TO BE DEEMED ILLEGAL.

The state game laws contain a provision that any dealer found with game on his premises at any other time than the lawful shooting season is liable to punishment. For this reason the game dealers of this city are much hampered in their business, especially in the trade in venison. The Minnesota venison season begins December 1st and lasts until fifteen days after that date. The Douglas county, Wisconsin, begins two months earlier. By all laws of common sense dealers here should be allowed to sell game shot in the lawful season across the bay without liability to arrest. It now appears from a decision of the supreme court of Michigan that such a law is unconstitutional and illegal.

A Detroit, Michigan, paper says: Last April Thomas O'Neil a game dealer of Detroit, was convicted of having game in his possession during the month of April, contrary to law. He proved that the game was brought from Missouri in the previous December, but the court held that that fact made no difference. An appeal was taken and the supreme court has just decided that the law was unconstitutional, because it not contained a provision not expressed in its title, and because the legislature exceeded the power when it attempted to punish a person for having in his possession game after the game killing season, which was lawfully killed.

Apparently therefore the Minnesota law will fall under the same category and can be evaded in the same way.

CALLUM ATING TOWER.

AT PAUL PAULSON ON BUSINESS METHODS IN THE NORTH PART OF THE STATE.

St. Paul Dispatch: An agent of the mercantile agencies lately returned from an official trip to the mining districts in and about Tower, and since his return has been of little use to his employer, having received a shock almost sufficient to de-throne his reason. Arriving at one of the little mining towns late in the afternoon and after looking round, it became this young man's duty to call upon the cashier of the town's only bank to receive some information. Having been guided to a frame building, which served at once for bank and dwelling, he knocked and called for the cashier. Presently he was shown to that some one was approaching the door within, which after being unlocked, was slowly opened an inch or two when he saw the first thing that greeted his eye was the muzzle of a building revolver. A deep voice sang out from the darkness behind the door, "What's your business?"

"I am a cashier," he replied, "and I am here to see you."

"That's all right," he responded, with forced exuberance. "Women are such liars."

"I have nothing to do with her story or yours. You swear that she stole money from you, and I have simply to recover that and leave her alone."

"That's all right," he responded, with forced exuberance. "Women are such liars."

NELLY'S RING.

I found the dandy waiting for me in the reception room when the police court was over for the day. He had no eye glass, but otherwise he was a swell of the most pronounced type, with light kid gloves, a silver headed cane and a pair of trousers of small check pattern, of which he appeared particularly vain. Between two fingers of his left hand he carried a lighted cigar, from which at intervals he sucked a minute dose of smoke with a lofty whistle which implied that to a great man like him the smoking of that delicious cigar was as disagreeable as the taking of physic to those of common clay. On hearing my name, this poor creature first tried to stare me out of countenance by way of impressing me with his greatness, and then, failing completely in that, he fondly exhibited the silver knob of his cane, took an admiring glance at his lovely check trousers, and then said:

"You're a catcher of thieves, I believe?"

"Yes, you are not one of them, are you?" I said, with a face as immovable as that of a statue.

"No, no," he flushed up, and needed a dandy stick at his elbow to bring him round. I came here—she—and you after me?"

"You've been robbed, then? And I look in surprise, for he did not look so much enraged or excited as uneasy and confused."

"Yes—I suppose that's the way to put it. I've been robbed of a ring set with diamonds and rubies and all that sort of thing, you know. I bought it some time ago to give to a lady who was to be my wife."

"And he snatched it from you? I'm sorry that the lady was to be his wife, and I was sorry to hear that he was so wicked."

"Oh, that's common enough," I shortly answered, thinking that I understood the whole case, "and the only safe plan is not to go into the company of low persons."

"True—very true," he no longer heartily returned, "but you see I never thought she would refuse to give it up."

"Oh, you didn't?" I laughed uproariously at his apparent simplicity. "You thought she would give it up whenever you asked it—well, who is she, and where does she live?"

"Her name is Nelly Stephens, and she works at McNab's, on the bridge, and she's what's called a machinist, and rather a pretty girl, too."

"Oh!" I returned with a gasp, "she works there?"

"Yes, nothing of the kind," he answered, with a guilty flush and a longed-for nibble at his cane. "She's a good enough girl, but she won't give up that ring."

"But how did you come to have anything to do with a girl in her position?" I wonderedingly asked.

"She's a tell," he answered, with a pensive look. "Suppose it's because I'm so deuced fascinating. The girls won't keep away from me sometimes, think I'll be smothered among them, or fairly eaten up like a lump of sugar candy," and he proudly adjusted his cigar and over that the business of his lavender kid gloves were all right.

"Ah! I suppose it's those lovely checked trousers that do it?" I eagerly and gravely suggested.

"Gad! I believe you've hit it!" he exclaimed, as he bestowed another worshipping glance on the small check. "No woman can resist them. But really," he added, with sublime complacency, "I cannot marry all the delightful creatures, some of them must be disappointed. Praps they'll break their hearts and die. But I'm not to be blamed for that. They should not fall in love with me."

"They should not, indeed," I emphatically responded.

"When will you get me the ring?" he asked, quite flattered by my words.

"Oh, that depends very much on the cunning and determination of the thief. You say she took it from you and refused to give it up?"

"Yes, something like that," he meekly answered. "And it cost me $10, and that's too much to lose."

"Well, you know, when a woman sets her heart on a thing she generally succeeds, so I shall probably not get the ring at all. She'll have it safely hidden, I've no doubt, but we can take her and punish her for the theft. I suppose you told her you were coming here to lodge the charges?"

"Yes, but the cunning jade wouldn't believe me. It's not easy getting a woman to believe you're in earnest," he added with a look of experience and another loving nibble at his cane knob. "What will be her sentence for stealing that ring?"

"Oh, praps thirty days. Has she ever been before?"

"Oh, no, she's respectable, you know."

"Strange, then, that she should refuse to give it up. Praps you've made love to her, though?"

"Never, never, 'pon honor," he boisterously answered, with a delighted chuckle, however, which implied that making love to simple girls and then repudiating it was the most noble occupation in the world. "I'll very likely tell you some fine story, but you'd not believe her?" he anxiously asked.

"I have nothing to do with her story or yours. You swear that she stole money from you, and I have simply to recover that and leave her alone."

"That's all right," he responded, with forced exuberance. "Women are such liars."

"I have nothing to do with her story or yours. You swear that she stole money from you, and I have simply to recover that and leave her alone."

and he protesting and entreating until they reached the wall, against which he banged his head till it swam. He did not turn round and give her in charge, for though he looked lazily for his hat and tried to crawl towards the door, when she again pounced upon him and slung him round his neck, he was too much for him. "I give that man, John Gray, in charge for deserting me and leaving me and my children chargeable with the parish," he said, towering above him like an avenging demon, and never for an instant relaxing her hold. "I got word that she was in Edinburgh, and came through last week, and today I found out his lodging and they sent me here."

A scream interrupted her, but this time it came from Nelly Stephens, who fainted away as if by magic. The schoolmistress had done. Miss Munro had just recovered, and was able to understand the words of the massive wife, but she seemed to have had enough of fainting for one day, and simply sat and stared. John Jenkins rushed to attend to Nelly Stephens, but the pallid despair on his hollow cheeks was gone, and in its place a flush of joy and hope.

"I asked a newcomer for proof of her charge, and she simply pointed to a hand bill on the wall near me, in which John Gray was fully and minutely proclaimed as having deserted his wife and children, and the sum of one guinea was offered for such information as should lead to his apprehension and conviction. I had seen the bill there for months, yet never once thought of applying the description to 'Ravenberg.' I fully expected the accused to stoutly deny his identity, but he seemed so anxious to get out of his wife's clutches, and away from her thick toothed boot, that he eagerly admitted every charge and asked to be locked in the cell which he had to spare. When we had all accommodated him and dismissed his wife, Nelly Stephens and Miss Munro turned to leave, each looking scornfully at the other, and apparently wishing the gigantic wife to be hanged."

Ravenberg was duly tried and sentenced to three months' imprisonment for deserting his wife, and I fully expected that he would add to that another for obtaining money under false pretences. But Nelly persisted in not making any charge, though she had been so bad at the theatre of a scandal, and that her dream was now over. I thought that in the state of mind she would look which always voted and unselfish fellow who had stood by her so long, but shortly after I changed to my own. Well, who is she, and where does she live? "Her name is Nelly Stephens, and she works at McNab's, on the bridge, and she's what's called a machinist, and rather a pretty girl, too."

"Oh!" I returned with a gasp, "she works there?"

"Yes, nothing of the kind," he answered, with a guilty flush and a longed-for nibble at his cane. "She's a good enough girl, but she won't give up that ring."

"But how did you come to have anything to do with a girl in her position?" I wonderedingly asked.

"She's a tell," he answered, with a pensive look. "Suppose it's because I'm so deuced fascinating. The girls won't keep away from me sometimes, think I'll be smothered among them, or fairly eaten up like a lump of sugar candy," and he proudly adjusted his cigar and over that the business of his lavender kid gloves were all right.

"Ah! I suppose it's those lovely checked trousers that do it?" I eagerly and gravely suggested.

"Gad! I believe you've hit it!" he exclaimed, as he bestowed another worshipping glance on the small check. "No woman can resist them. But really," he added, with sublime complacency, "I cannot marry all the delightful creatures, some of them must be disappointed. Praps they'll break their hearts and die. But I'm not to be blamed for that. They should not fall in love with me."

"They should not, indeed," I emphatically responded.

"When will you get me the ring?" he asked, quite flattered by my words.

"Oh, that depends very much on the cunning and determination of the thief. You say she took it from you and refused to give it up?"

"Yes, something like that," he meekly answered. "And it cost me $10, and that's too much to lose."

"Well, you know, when a woman sets her heart on a thing she generally succeeds, so I shall probably not get the ring at all. She'll have it safely hidden, I've no doubt, but we can take her and punish her for the theft. I suppose you told her you were coming here to lodge the charges?"

"Yes, but the cunning jade wouldn't believe me. It's not easy getting a woman to believe you're in earnest," he added with a look of experience and another loving nibble at his cane knob. "What will be her sentence for stealing that ring?"

"Oh, praps thirty days. Has she ever been before?"

"Oh, no, she's respectable, you know."

"Strange, then, that she should refuse to give it up. Praps you've made love to her, though?"

"Never, never, 'pon honor," he boisterously answered, with a delighted chuckle, however, which implied that making love to simple girls and then repudiating it was the most noble occupation in the world. "I'll very likely tell you some fine story, but you'd not believe her?" he anxiously asked.

"I have nothing to do with her story or yours. You swear that she stole money from you, and I have simply to recover that and leave her alone."

"That's all right," he responded, with forced exuberance. "Women are such liars."

"I have nothing to do with her story or yours. You swear that she stole money from you, and I have simply to recover that and leave her alone."

The long-looked for fair of the Svea society will commence next Monday at their hall. Extensive preparations have been made for a grand and successful entertainment. The booths will all be attractively arranged and innumerable articles placed on sale. A gold headed cane will be awarded to the most popular candidate for sheriff, and there will be a contest for a prize between Miss Florence Von Buskirk and Miss Rebecca Johnson.

MATTERS POLITICAL.

E. M. Wilson is billed to speak for the democracy next month.

Attorney Cotton made a speech last night at the young men's Republican meeting.

The Republican meetings are creating great enthusiasm among the people of St. Louis county.

Dr. McCormick says there is not the least possible doubt of Gen. Harrison's triumphant election on November 6th. Col. Evans will draw a large audience to hear him speak, and the Millard square will be an additional inducement for people to attend.

It is assuredly conceded that every Republican in St. Louis county will be elected by a larger majority than any received two years ago.

The Millard square is receiving praise everywhere for their singing. They will be here at the grand Republican demonstration on Saturday night.

Senator Whitman says the election in New York is very close. This is a frank confession for a democrat to make, inasmuch as the party has been claiming 25,000 majority.

Bets are being made daily on the coming national election, some betting money while the majority of the wagers are for winning of some native or citizen. Republicans are plenty who want to bet on General Harrison.

Tonight the great Scandinavian meeting takes place at the opera house. The orator of the evening will be Rev. C. A. Swenson, of Kansas City who is a brilliant orator and thoroughly conversant on the issues of the campaign.

Remember that the precincts in the Third ward have been changed since last spring, and unless your name has been added to the list by the board you will have to register again. Go and find out next Tuesday and be sure.

A SHIP OVER NIAGARA.

I copy from a letter which was written by a former resident of Lancaster an account of a most remarkable occurrence at Niagara Falls sixty years ago, which the writer of the letter witnessed, and of which it is doubtful if many people of today ever heard. No history of Niagara Falls that I ever saw gives any account of it, although nothing that ever occurred at the great cataract has a more peculiar interest. The letter is especially interesting as giving an illustration of the manner in which people went on excursions in the days before railroads. It is doubtful if so many people have ever gathered at the falls at one time since the day described in this letter. Here is the extract:

"Buffalo, Sept. 9, 1838.
"I was in hope that I should have got back to this town from the Niagara falls last evening in time to have dropped you a line respecting the fate of the schooner Michigan, but owing to the delay in getting away, waiting for our passengers and some derangement of the machinery of the steamboat and the head wind, we did not arrive until 1 o'clock this morning. As the exhibition yesterday was of a novel character and has excited much more interest than any person could have anticipated when it was first mentioned, you will doubtless be anxious to learn the particulars, and to gratify your curiosity I will endeavor to give you the story as much in detail as possible.

"The schooner Michigan was the largest on Lake Erie, and too large, in fact, to enter the various harbors of the lake, and, being somewhat decayed in her upper works, the thought struck the owner, Maj. Fraser, formerly of New York, that she would answer the purpose of towing the fate of a vessel that by accident might approach too near the stupendous cataract of Niagara, and also of the fate of animals that might be caught in the rapids of those swift rolling waters and carried over the falls.

"The proprietors of the large public houses at the falls, on both sides of the river, and of stages and steamboats, made up a purse to purchase the schooner, aware that they would be repaid by the company which the exhibition would attract, and in the calculation they were not deceived.

"For several days previous to the 17th the stage came crowded, as well as the canal boats, so much so that it was difficult to find a conveyance to the falls, and such was the interest that the descent was the only topic of conversation among all classes. On the night of the 17th the 7th wagon filled with country people rattled through this town all night, and on Saturday morning Buffalo itself seemed to be moving in a mass toward the point of attraction. To accommodate those who could not find a passage in carriages, five steamboats had advertised to leave here on Saturday morning. They were the Henry Clay, William Penn, Piquette, Niagara, and Chippewa, being all the steamboats on Lake Erie except the Superior. The Chippewa was appointed to tow down the pirate schooner (as she was termed), the Michigan, which service she performed. I took my passage on board this boat, and we got under way before the others, passed through the boat at Black Rock, and about a mile below the rock took in tow the vessel destined to make the dreadful plunge. As soon as we got under way the scene became interesting. The sun shone in full splendor, the waters of the Erie were placid, there being scarcely a ripple upon its surface, and a few miles astern of us four steamers crowded with passengers, and with hundreds of muskies on board, were plowing their way down the rapids of Niagara. Our little boat towed the Michigan as far as Yale's Landing, a British shore within three miles of the falls, where she anchored, and at this place the Chippewa landed her passengers as well as the William Penn, and they were conveyed from there to the falls in vehicles of all descriptions. The three other steamers landed their passengers on the American side.

"Three o'clock was the hour appointed to weigh anchor. On board the Michigan, the task of towing her from Yale's Landing to the rapids, and a most hazardous one it was, was intrusted to Capt. R. H. R. the oldest captain on the lake. With a yawl boat and five oarsmen, of stout hearts and strong arms, the old captain got the schooner under way, and towed her till within one-quarter of a mile of the first rapids, and within half a mile of the tremendous precipice, as near as they dared approach. Cutting her adrift, she passed majestically on, while the oarsmen of the yawl had to pull for their lives to make themselves safe. Indeed, such were the fears of the men, as I have understood, that on approaching near the rapids they cut the low line before they had orders from their commander.

"And now we approach the interesting moment of the exhibition. The right grounds on both sides of the American and British shores were lined with people, having a full view of the rapid and of the approach of the vessel, and now it was that a thousand fears and expectations were indulged, as the Michigan, unguided by human agency, approached, head on, the first rapid or descent, and apparently keeping the very course which the most skillful navigator would have pursued, having an American ensign flying from her bowsprit and the British jack displayed at her stern. She passed the first rapid unhurt, still head on, making a plunge, shipping a sea, and rising from it in beautiful style. In her descent over the second her masts went by the board, at the same moment affording those who have never witnessed a shipwreck a spectacle of the spars of a ship at sea in a wreck. Expectation of her fate was now at the height, she swung around and presented her broad side to the dashing and foaming water, and after remaining stationary a moment or two, was, by its force, sprung round, stern foremost, and, having passed the third rapid, she killed, but carried her hull apparently whole between Goat Island and the British shore to the Horseshoe, over which she was carried stern foremost and launched into the abyss below. In her fall she was dashed to pieces. I went below the falls immediately after the descent, and the river presented a singular appearance from the thousands of floating fragments, there being scarcely to be seen any two boards united together, and many of her timbers were broken into twenty pieces. Such was the eagerness of the multitude present to procure a piece of her that before sunset a great part of her was carried away.

"I believe I have already informed you of the animals on board. They consisted of a buffalo from the Rocky mountains, two bears from Green bay and Grand river, two foxes, a muskox, a dog, a cat and four geese. The fate of these you will probably wish to learn. When the vessel was left to her fate they were let loose on deck, except the buffalo, who was secured in a temporary pen. The two bears left the vessel shortly after she began to descend the rapids, and swam ashore, notwithstanding the rapidity of the current. On reaching the British shore they were taken. The buffalo was seen to pass over the falls, but was never seen afterward. Before the vessel reached the first rapid those who had glasses could see one of the bears climbing the mast, and the foxes, etc., were also running up and down, but nothing was seen of them after the schooner passed over. The only live animals of the crew that passed over the falls were two geese, they were taken up unhurt. Maj. Fraser obtained one, and an English gentleman purchased the other for $2. Respecting the ellipsis, the only one I saw below the falls was Gen. Jackson, apparently unhurt, throwing his arms about and knocking his legs together in the eddies, as though he was the only one of the crew that escaped unhurt.

"The calculations are various as to the number of persons assembled on both shores. Some estimate them as low as 15,000 and others at 50,000. The greatest body of people were on the American side. Goat Island for a considerable distance exhibited a dense column of persons, and the bridge erected from Goat Island, which is built a hundred feet over the rapids, was also crowded, and temporary booths, made with the boughs of trees, skirted both shores. As we passed down the Niagara we had a full view of the whole distance from Buffalo of the hundreds of vehicles of all descriptions passing towards the falls, and as the weather has been uncommonly hot and dry for a long time the roads presented uninterrupted columns of dust as far as the eye could extend. In fact, so much larger was the assemblage than was anticipated that, notwithstanding the proprietors of the public houses had laid in an unusual supply of refreshments, they had not provided sufficient for one-half the people, and thousands were unable to obtain a mouthful of anything. You may judge of the situation of matters when I assure you that I stopped at Forsyth's about 4 o'clock p. m., after climbing up his everlasting steps from the bottom of the falls, and was unable to obtain even a cracker or a glass of water; and this was the case at Brown's also. On the American side, I learn that everything eatable and drinkable was consumed before one-half the visitors had obtained anything.

"So well pleased are the people with this grand and novel aquatic exhibition that already they are talking about getting up something more splendid next year. In this the laudable respect and stage proprietors will heartily join, as the present frolic has afforded them a fine harvest for some time. New York Sun.

A Guest's Ingenious Plan.

The story is told of a young Boston salesman, who, going to the mountains, found there a magnet so strong that he lost account of time, and at length was unable to reconcile the expense of his prolonged stay with the sum total of funds at his disposal. Then again, were he obliged to leave his trunk behind as security for the balance due, he would arrive in the city with a wardrobe almost as depleted as was that of the famous Flora McFlimney, and the small amount he would be able to set aside from his moderate weekly salary would be so long in liquidating his summer debts that his case would be a desperate one, especially as he was a great dresser. To get the trunk from the house without attracting attention, and consequently preventing an embarrassing scene, was an impossibility; to do without the trunk was too fearful to contemplate, with the prospect of his well selected wardrobe about a hundred miles away.

A bright idea entered his mind, affording apparently the only way out of the difficulty. He had been a frequent reader of accounts of the mountains to distant friends. He conceived the plan of sending some to his Boston address. Gradually and stealthily he shipped by parcel post the contents of his wardrobe, until the latter was very thoroughly depleted of its contents. A week went by, the parcel post was completed, and the trunk was safely homeward; but the city holds at least one returned mountain visitor whose mind is anything but easy, and who is practicing the most rigid economy that he may cancel his indebtedness before a suspicious examination of the trunk may expose his plan of operations.—Boston Budget.

POLITICAL POT.

It's Boiling and Every One is Enthusiastic Over the Republican Prospects

SCANDINAVIAN PARADE AND SPEECH.

Mr. Swenson Talks to a Large Audience—Small Items of General Interest.

Early last evening Scandinavian republicans to the number of nearly 200 met on East Superior street and formed in line for the first torchlight procession of the season. The parade was incidental to the address of Rev. C. A. Swenson to voters. The marchers were headed by the city band, chief marshal Louis Reitz, to whose efforts was in great part due the success of the procession and by Assistant Marshals Wisted and Swenson. Their torches were in good condition, they marched beneath the American, Swedish, and Norwegian flags and they carried a number of transparencies strongly republican in sentiment. As they enthusiastically marched and counter-marched along the well paved street they presented an inspiring sight.

At the opera house the speaker of the evening, Rev. C. A. Swenson, of Kansas City, was on the stage with a large delegation of prominent Scandinavian republicans, among them M. O. Hall, chairman of the evening, E. G. Swanson, J. H. Nordby, S. H. Stenstrom, O. P. Swenson, Louis Reitz, Ver Wasted, F. H. Grothman, Bert Johnson, Nils Hall, Sven Dahl, Louis Olson and others. The large hall was already well filled when the marchers filed in and took their seats. Probably 800 people listened to the hour's talk of Mr. Swenson on the issues of the campaign. He spoke in Swedish and his words were listened to with attention and evident interest by his hearers who frequently interrupted him by applause and laughter. He spoke on the tariff, showing what protection had done for the workingman and what free trade would do, on trusts and monopolies and regretted the hold which the prohibition party had taken of his countrymen, as opposed to the republican party, the true advocates of temperance. He was glad, however, to see sitting on the platform those who had earlier in the campaign been mentioned as prohibitionists. After a comparison of the different candidates he closed.

MATTERS POLITICAL.

C. C. Hartman received yesterday $100 from some Chicago grain broker to be put here, if possible, even on the election, the Chicagoan being a Democrat. The money was quickly taken. Today he received $500 more, this time from New York, also from a Democrat, to be put up on the same condition. It also found ready takers. Duluth people don't know any place better suited for the money of these Democrats than this city, and they are willing to nail all that will be sent out. These bids were all made by Board of Trade men.

Senator A. J. Whiteman: From a money point of view, I would feel much more of Indiana's going Democratic than New York, in the latter state the question is mixed and very doubtful, but I am confident that Indiana is all right for the Democracy and I have some money to put up a splendid campaign in Indiana and it is doing its work well there.

Prof. W. H. Stultz is attending strictly to his school duties and will be re-elected county superintendent of schools without doubt. He has made a capable and efficient officer.

The Millard quartette, composed of C. L. Millard, Frank Stroud, S. Strop and H. Schran were at the St. Louis this morning and went to town on the morning train.

R. G. Evans, of Minneapolis, addresses a Republican audience at the opera house tomorrow evening. The Millard quartette will sing campaign songs.

The usual number of small boys who are indispensable to a parade joined on the rear end of last night's procession. Edmund Sharwood's record for the past two years is a sufficient guarantee of his qualifications for a reelection.

R. H. Shadrick, the labor orator, arrived in the city last night and is all prepared to make a roaring speech.

The Republican headquarters were visited by a large number of voters today. The young Republicans are doing excellent work for the county ticket.

The prohibitionists are talking of having a parade some evening next week. The regular meeting of the Mesaba club takes place tonight.

Remember and register next Tuesday.

Where Children Are Stolen. Incidents have recently occurred in Naples which remind us of what happened here and in Italy some thirty or forty years ago. A cry was raised then that "poisoners" were about inflicting a fearful suffering under the name of cholera. Suspected persons were hunted in the streets as though they were wild beasts; humanity in an active form was regarded as a crime, and benevolent persons prescribing or giving remedies to sufferers were in universal danger of becoming victims of popular fury. Many years have passed since then, yet under a different name very similar facts have occurred within the last few days. "I raptori di fanciulli" (the captors of children) has been the cry of alarm, and a perfect panic ensued. Mothers shut up their children in their houses. The doors of their children and higher schools were besieged by crowds of weeping women looking for their children, and giving orders to the trustees not to intrude into any but trustworthy persons commissioned by the relatives.

To spite of all efforts to dislodge the minds of the ignorant, the panic continued. There were not many children said to be missing but where were they? As is always the case in such circumstances, reports were circulated by ill disposed persons, sure to find believers among ignorant multitudes. Perhaps the panic was due to a certain extent to an order lately issued by the government to the prefects of the kingdom to compile a statement of those who live forgotten in the streets, without houses or families. I am excited in a city and province where the purchase and sale of human beings for the most degrading purposes, if not convicted at home, have not been suppressed far more rigidly than they have been. Thanks to international regulations, however, between Italy and the United States, this transatlantic evil will be at least greatly checked—so far as regards these countries—Naples Letter in London Times.

WEST DULUTH.

The program arranged by the Svenska society for its fair to commence next Monday evening is varied and interesting. The evening for the sheriff will take place on Friday evening instead of on Monday as previously announced. A number of valuable gifts are to be given to the fortunate holders of the right number. Among them being a parlor lamp, silk dress, coal stove, album and dressing case. The Swedish quartette will sing a few selections on Wednesday evening.

C. F. Ward master mechanic of the St. Paul & Duluth after attending to some business here left for St. Paul. He was accompanied by E. J. Beaudreau, fuel agent of the same company.

Many of the West End residents joined in the parade last night and afterwards went to the opera house and listened to the able address of Rev. Swenson, of Kansas City.

Urging a Burial Reform. There has lately been a good deal of complaint about the mode of burial in a Jewish cemetery on Long Island. The complaint is that in many cases no coffin was used. The body is brought to the grave in a box, which is opened beside the grave and the body taken out. The box is then taken apart and some of the boards put into the grave. The body is then placed on these, the other boards laid over it, and the grave filled up. This kind of burial is said to be "scandalous," and also highly objectionable in a sanitary sense, and quite a fact is made about it in the neighborhood of the cemetery in question.

But at the very time the time is going on and getting into the papers, a meeting of churchmen is held in New York to urge a "burial reform" very closely resembling the condemned custom in the Jewish cemetery. Dr. Huntington, pastor of several other Episcopal churches, was present. The practice of inclosing the dead in tight coffins or caskets, and then inclosing these in strong boxes was declared to be bad in every way, as it arrests the quick decay which the great chemist, Nature, intends shall take place. One of the speakers, describing funeral customs, said that until the time of Charles II coffins were unknown. Bodies were laid on planks, with a turf at the head and foot, and the grave then closed over them. So there does not seem to be anything very shocking in the custom at that Jewish cemetery, after all. It is an old English custom, rather than a barbarous one peculiar to the poorer Polish Jews. And, instead of being bad in a sanitary way, the clergyman appears to think it much better than ours—New York Cor. Detroit Free Press.

RESOLUTION

Vacating Part of Alley Extending from Twenty-fifth Avenue West to the Easterly Line of Lots 391 and 392, in Block 121, Second Division, Duluth Proper.

WHEREAS, A petition of a majority of the owners of property on the line of the alley hereinafter mentioned, resident within said city have petitioned the Common Council of said city for a vacation of that portion of the alley extending from Twenty-fifth Avenue west to the Easterly line of lots 391 and 392 in block 121 Duluth proper, Second division aforesaid, and the same is hereby resolved:

First.—That all of that portion of the alley extending from Twenty-fifth Avenue west to the Easterly line of lots 391 and 392 in block 121 Duluth proper, Second division aforesaid, be and the same is hereby vacated.

Second.—That the City of Duluth hereby accept the dedication of the Easterly twenty feet of lot 391 in said block 121 made by the board of education of the independent school district of Duluth in said petition to be perpetually used as an alley or passage, and the same shall be built on the west side of said block.

Third.—That for the purpose of perpetuating the dedication of said twenty feet of said lot 391 as well as of the vacation of the portion of said alley above described, the city clerk is hereby ordered and directed to make a certified copy of all of the papers connected with said vacation and dedication and have the same recorded in the office of the register of deeds, said county of St. Louis.

Adopted Oct. 23, 1888.

H. C. KENDALL, President of Council.

ATTEST: CHAS. E. BURD, City Clerk.

SEAL. Approved Oct. 23, 1888. J. B. SUTPHIN, Mayor.

Notice to Build Sidewalks.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE owners and occupants of any and all lots or parcels of land adjoining the west side of Twenty-fifth Avenue west from Michigan street to Third street that in accordance with a resolution of the Common Council of the City of Duluth, passed October 22nd, 1888, a sidewalk will be built on the west side of Twenty-fifth Avenue west between the limits above named.

And that all property owners or occupants of any and all lots or parcels of land adjoining the west side of Twenty-fifth Avenue west between the points above named are required to construct so much of said sidewalk as adjoins their several lots, within twenty days after the 29th day of October, 1888, and if such owners or occupants fail to build said sidewalk within the said twenty days after the 29th day of October, 1888, the same shall be built by the Board of Public Works of the City of Duluth, and the full cost and expense thereof, together with ten (10) per cent additional for cost of surveys, plans and superintendence, will be assessed against their said lots.

Said sidewalk to be constructed of asphalt, or of good sound, new twelve inch plank, dressed to a thickness, laid crosswise upon three 4x8 stringers, and to be built upon the established grade, or to a temporary grade given by the City Engineer, under direction and subject to approval of the Board of Public Works.

MICHAEL HENNEL, President.

MATTERS POLITICAL.

Col. R. G. Evans and Hon. T. E. Byrnes will address an audience at the opera house this evening. Both these gentlemen are recognized orators of ability, and the speeches tonight will be among the best yet delivered in this campaign. Everybody turn out and hear good Republican doctrine.

The Young Men's Republican club in conjunction with all Republicans will give a mammoth parade one week from to-night. Several balls have been engaged and there will be a question in different language in various parts of the hall.

The Mesaba club held a meeting last night in Ingalls hall which was addressed by Senator Whitman. Committees were appointed to meet on Thursday next when he arrives here to make an address.

Four bills of $100 each on the general result of the Presidential election were made at the St. Louis hotel this morning. The indications are that the wages on the coming election will double those of four years ago.

There will be a French mass meeting at Svea hall to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. There will be speeches and addresses and all the Frenchmen in St. Louis county are urged to be present to express their views on politics.

The colored men held a meeting in the Metropolitan block last evening which was addressed by several colored orators. Committees were appointed and adjournment taken to next Monday night.

There is practically no opposition to W. B. Patton, the Republican candidate for county surveyor, now that candidate Durand of the Democrats has gone to Marquette.

S. P. Sively and John Owens addressed the Young Men's Republican club last night and were well received. Their arguments were local and entertaining.

Of the 250 names registered in the second precinct of the fourth ward, a careful canvass reveals but about 50 Democrats.

Next Tuesday is the last day of registration and every one should see that their name is on the books.

The Millard quartette is here and will furnish some excellent music to-night at the opera house.

WEST DULUTH.

Francis, the thirteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Fish, met with an accident yesterday afternoon which resulted in his death last night. He was returning from school on the out-bound Ashland train and when he jumped off at Rice's Point, he stumbled and fell under the cars, the wheels passing over his right leg. He was taken to his home and physicians called, but the boy died from the severe shock. Universal sympathy is expressed to the parents.

A ball was given in Svea hall last night by the friends of Gas Norton which was a success. About thirty couples were in attendance and a fine supper was furnished during the evening.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

RESULT OF NEGLECTING A SLIGHT COLD.

Interesting Evidence of a Condition Not To Be Trifled With.

There is probably no contractor and builder in Duluth and few in the northwest, better known than Mr. Robert C. Jordan, who resides at No. 124 East First street. He has a reputation of putting up a building in less time than any other man in the business. He employs a large number of men, and has at present under the charge the construction of some fine blocks here. In conversation with the writer Mr. Jordan remarked that he was feeling much better this spring than he has for years. He said that about six years ago he caught a bad cold, which settled in his head, and kept returning at intervals with out apparent cause. He found it both to his mind and body a great nuisance, and he had to be careful of it. Many times he would find himself unable to complete his figures on a plan in the given time, and would have to return to the architect's plan without having having vainly striven for two or three days to do what he ordinarily could do in a few hours. Also had frontal headache with pain through the eyes and a continual dropping of mucus from the head into the throat which was very annoying. Had no appetite mornings and many times felt that life was burdensome.

He tried all the advertised remedies, but found the trouble getting worse all the time.

Seeing by the daily papers that Dr. Coe was making a specialty of cases like his, he concluded to go and see him, and did so.

What was the trouble?

Why, after careful examination, the doctor told me that I was suffering from chronic catarrh and that he could cure me, but that it would take some time, probably three months to effect a cure.

I feel like another man—sleep well, have an excellent appetite, and my head feels as clear as a bell. Headache is all gone and can figure as well as ever. I am not bothered scarcely and by the dropping of mucus in my throat. I feel very thankful to Dr. Coe for his treatment, and most heartily recommend Dr. Coe and his mode of treatment to any suffering with catarrh.

Dr. Coe, Robert Craig, U. S. A., who has been in Duluth a few days inspecting the signal service here, left last night. Mr. Craig before his departure delivered himself as follows on politics.

"I have been traveling over the country this fall, in Kentucky, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and other states and find the Democrats confident of success, and sure of victory."

Mr. Craig has probably happened to strike Democratic strongholds.

No Other Railway in the Northwest.

has in so short a period gained the reputation and popularity enjoyed by the WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINE. From a comparatively unknown factor in the commercial world it has been transformed to an independent, influential, grand Through Route, with magnificent double, superb equipment and unsurpassed terminal facilities. Through careful attention to details it has won for itself a reputation for solidity, safety, convenience and attention to its patrons second to no railway in the country. Pullman sleepers, models of palatial comfort, dining cars in which the cuisine and general appointments are up to the highest standard, and coaches especially built for this route are among the chief elements which have contributed towards entering successfully to a discriminating public. Located directly on its line, between Minneapolis and St. Paul, and Milwaukee and Chicago, and between Duluth and Chicago, are the following thriving cities of Wisconsin and Michigan: New Richmond, Chippewa Falls, Eau Claire, Ashland, Hurley, Wis., Ironwood, Mich., Bessemer, Mich., Stevens Point, Menasha, Wis., Fond du Lac, Waukesha, and Burlington, Wis.

A FEMALE FRAUD.

A Handsome and Richly Attired Woman Sentenced to Five Years in Prison

AN EXPERIENCED CLEVER SWINDLER.

Her Modus Operandi Practiced All Over the Entire World with Success.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—When the gates of Dartmoor prison closed behind Mrs. Gordon Wallace this morning one of the most experienced swindlers in the criminal history of the country was cut off from the outer world for four years at least. Young, handsome and of magnificent proportions, very few of those that saw her standing in the dock at the old Bailey on Tuesday, diamond pendant in her ears clustered upon her fingers, and attired in one of Worth's latest dresses, imagined for a moment that she could fall back upon an innocent position upon some of the persons that were sitting in judgment upon her. But English juries are proverbial for their story heartiness, and so it happened that the fair woman was speedily convicted and sentenced to five years penal servitude one year of which will be remitted if she behaves herself. Her modus operandi which she has practiced in the large cities of the country was very simple. She would have a furnished house in the most fashionable locality, engage a retinue of butlers, footmen and domestic servants, and set up an establishment on an elaborate scale. When settling day with the tradesmen came they were paid in checks on banks in distant parts of the country, and as the checks were always for sums three or four times in excess of the amount of the bill the difference in cash was always forthcoming by and by the checks would be returned marked "no account" but by this time the bird would have flown to green fields and pastures now leaving landlord servants and everybody else in the lurch. It was a similar scheme in this city that brought her up on the round turn. It is estimated by the police officers who have instrumental in securing the conviction that she netted by her frauds in the past five years nearly three millions of dollars. What she did with it all is a mystery.

CHANCE TO MARRY.

HERE IS AN OPPORTUNITY FOR THE MATHEMATICALLY INCLINED YOUNG LADIES. The fact that there are so many marriageable gentlemen in Duluth is a surprise to strangers and the number is not so particularly surprising as the quality. There is no denying that they are of an exceptionally fine character and without an exception would prove model husbands to the average western girl. Without casting any reflection on the gentlemen who appear in this issue, they are not up to the standard of the Duluth men. The names are given with their good qualities, simply because variety is the spice of life and some of the young ladies may have their eye on these very same bachelors. The following names are given with the hope that some good may result.

J. Kert Persons, a lawyer, and rated a good one. He is a "stud" and heavy. He is inclined to be somewhat frivolous and occasionally one of the boys. This can be overcome by a wife's prudent management. He is not rich, but has a good income, enough to support a frugal wife. Let him marry the right kind of a girl and his morals, no doubt will be improved. They must be one of the female kind, but one of brains and style. Those that cannot answer these requirements, Mr. Persons requests, that they do not correspond with him.

Some people might not like Arthur J. Walling, manager of the St. Louis hotel, but that is because they do not know him. He is a man of excellent principles and is kind and obliging. As an Englishman he is successful but as yet has attained no reputation as a "lad" in the city. He would not only have a good home but would secure a bright, good natured and reputable husband. Correspondents should be shy in addressing him too affectionately, to begin with.

Johnnie Agnew is a difficult character to describe. He can assimilate with but few and those must rank with the highest. His virtues are many while his faults are equally numerous. It must be understood from this that these are those that fail to the average young man. He does not exactly live here but could be induced to. His friends are legion, his temper good, is bright and smart and has a royal income. Mr. Agnew as a benefit would be a success.

Dr. Woodberry is a dentist here and has already attracted much attention from the ladies. He is a Y. M. C. A. young man which is to his credit. His character is unapproachable and he is genial and companionable. Of course there are many ladies he would not suit and others would be exceptionally pleased to attend before the altar with him and say "I do."

H. N. McHarg is a modest and quiet but not few know of his qualifications for a husband's life. He is a teller in the Duluth Union National bank and is well fixed financially. He is a handsome, good natured, dressy stylish and witty, would make a capital husband. A wife could do all the talking as he very seldom says much himself.

A Good Home. The Messrs. McKay Bros., proprietors of the European Hotel, at 215 West Superior street, have in a period of five months made an enviable reputation as proprietors of the above well known hotel. Its central location renders it convenient to reach from any part of the city. This coupled with the fact that all the rooms are large well furnished and heated and that the McKay Bros. do all in their power to make one comfortable has caused this house to be a veritable home to all who go there. Vacant rooms are numerous on all sides of them while their patronage is increasing every day. Rooms can be secured from fifty cents per day up and by the week or month at reasonable rates. If you are in need of good comfortable lodgings don't fail to go there.

Something New. Cormany, the well known photographer, at 413 West Superior street, is about to inaugurate something new which will be of interest to residents of the Herald. Commencing this evening and in the future he will take photographs by electric light. This light is fully equal to day light and the novelty, as well as convenience offered to many who are busy during the day, ought to make his enterprise a paying one. Mr. Cormany says he is the only photographer in the city who does not keep his gallery open Sundays. Remember his number and call on him.

You can get a handsome velvet or cashmere suit well lined and trimmed and guaranteed to fit, for $22.50 at Harrington's, 321 Opera House block.

HABITS OF THE TIGER.

The Mode in Which It Kills and Eats Its Prey.

In a paper read before the Bombay Natural History Society recently, and published in its journal, Mr. Inverarity, a noted shikari, discussed the habits of the tiger, and especially the mode in which it kills and eats its prey. Some think he seizes by throat, others by the nape of the neck from above. Mr. Inverarity has examined scores of slain animals, with special reference to this point, and in every case but one the throat was seized from below. Whether dislocation of the neck takes place is doubtful. The same hunting leopards always kill by pressure on the windpipe, without breaking the skin, possibly the tiger kills in the same way. It is only by accident, if at all, that tigers in killing sever any important vein or artery, and no blood to speak of flows from the throat wound.

Having killed, the tiger almost invariably begins eating a hind quarter, consuming one or probably both. Animals are never eaten where they are killed, but are always dragged a short distance. They are not lifted clear of the ground, but dragged. Having gorged himself, the tiger sometimes lies close by his prey, but if it is hot weather and there are hills in the neighborhood, he will go a long distance off before resting for the day. He returns next night and finishes what is left, but he never eats a second time in the same spot, dragging the remains of the prey forty or fifty yards off. The tiger takes about two hours' steady eating to finish the fore quarters of a bullock. Tigers are omnivorous, they will make their meals off each other. They are supposed to kill once in five or six days, and no doubt the tiger, after a heavy feed, does not care to hunt much for a few days; but a tiger kills whenever he can. They have been known to kill on fourteen consecutive nights.

Mr. Inverarity believes that animals killed by tigers suffer little beyond the pain of a few seconds. The shock produces a stupor and drowsiness, in which there is no sense of pain or feeling of terror. The powerful stroke of the fore paw of the tiger is a death blow, he clutches with his claws, as one might with the fingers, but does not strike a blow.

Tigers wander immense distances at night, and as they like easy going they go on the roads and paths. They do not like to move during the heat of the day, as the hot ground burns their pads and makes them raw. They can on occasion climb trees. In Salsette one climbed after a certain Pandoo, but could not reach him and retired. The Pandoo, thinking the coast clear, got down and ran toward home, but on the way was seized by the tiger and killed. The Pandoo's report stated that "Pandoo died of the tiger eating him; there was no other cause of death." Nothing was left except some fingers, which probably belonged to the right or left hand. Natives have a belief that the ghosts of the man whose victims ride in his head and warn him of danger, or point the way to fresh victims.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Latest Confidence Scheme.

Sergeant Schmittberger eyed the bunko man with anything but favor. "See here, Lake," he cried, "I thought you were ordered out of this precinct. Now get out." "Don't be hard on me, sergeant," the bunko man said, in a pleading tone. "You know I ain't doing any bunko business. Bunko's busted in this town."

"I'd like to know how you fellows live, anyhow," the sergeant growled.

"It's pretentious tough living," the bunko man replied, mournfully; "but we try to make a few dollars by the hat racket nowadays."

"What racket?" retorted the sergeant.

"What the deuce do you call that?"

"Why, that's the latest confidence scheme, and it ought to be worth something to us if we discover it," the bunko man replied.

"You see, every big hotel has a hat store adjoining it. Well, I go into the case of one of these hotels, hang around until some chap comes along that is likely to bite, and manage to make friends with him in an off hand way by pretending to mistake him for somebody else, and then apologizing and standing up the drinks in a treat on the blunder. Just as I am about to drink with him, though, I set the glass down on the bar and exclaim, suddenly:

"Oh, by the way, just excuse me a moment, will you? I've got a hat in here waiting for me. I'll just go and get it and come back."

"Then I walk into the hat store and out through the front door into the street, and then back again into the hotel cafe, and, hauling out a $50 gold certificate, say seductively as I display it:

"I beg pardon for troubling you, but can you change this for me? The hatter is short of small bills, and I don't want to take all the bartender's got."

"It's a hundred to one that the stranger can't change the bill, and then I jump in and add, after he has expressed his regret at being unable to accommodate me, 'Just let me have a five for a moment, will you? I'll go and let the hat and join you, and we'll get this fifty changed somewhere else.'"

"It's a funny thing," the bunko man said untruthfully, "but it's the truth, all the same, that in nine cases out of ten the thing works and I get the five. When I do, I just walk out into the hat store the same as before, but I never come back, see? That's the hat racket. Play we have to play it for such a country makes a $5 bill, though, isn't it?"

"It's a great pity you can't be honest," Sergeant Schmittberger replied, as he seized the bunko man's shoulder and gave him a violent shake. "If you try any hat racket or any other kind of a racket here, or are seen in this precinct again, you'll land in a cell. Get out."

The man with the face that was child like and bland did not stand upon the order of his going, but started toward Fourth avenue.—New York Sun.

The Plague in England. The plague in England, described by Defoe as an eye witness, though he was not an infant in 1665 and 1666 when it raged, though terrible, was not to be compared for virulence with the plague of 1846; as many died, indeed, perhaps more, but in a much larger population. It began in the autumn of 1665, but the cold winter of 1665-1666 greatly checked its ravages, and many hoped that it would altogether disappear. But with the early spring of 1666 deaths from the pestilence began to be announced, until presently it began to be recognized that the real attack had commenced. The symptoms were akin to those observed during the plague of Florence, but sometimes death came even more rapidly. In July 8,000 died weekly, but by September the weekly number of deaths from the plague had risen to 8,000.

The dead were buried together in certain fields, then suburban, now within London proper. There is one triangular space (not built on) between Brompton and Kensington where large numbers were buried. Many of the dead were buried in the fields at present occupied by the houses on Golden square, and it was noticed that during the visitation of cholera in 1849 the disease seemed more malignant in that region, but whether this was due, as some surmised, to the opening of drains communicating with the trenches in which the plague stricken were buried in 1665 and 1666 seems open to considerable question.—Richard A. Proctor.

GOLDEN ROD.

By the roadside, nodding yellow, In the autumn sunlight, yellow, Where the withered mulleins nod, Bends and sways the golden rod.

And the winds are blowing, calling "Winter!" to the red leaves falling, To the milk weed's slender rod, To the shivering golden rod.

See! the winds are blowing faster, Over grasses, shrubs, asfer, Over the withered, yellow rod, Where was born the golden rod.

Glowing fainter, bows its body, Through the snowflakes falling madly, And some message sent by God, Faint and dim in golden rod.
